

The securities industry today faces an array of new regulations that impact order handling, trading, and reporting requirements. Securities processing requirements grow more complex and mistakes can be costly. Organizations are being challenged to adopt new processes and procedures in an environment where regulatory compliance is critical. Firms must expand their infrastructures and systems capabilities while maintaining an efficient and competitive cost structure.

The Financial Information Forum (FIF) is a necessary resource that helps organizations understand new initiatives and develop implementation responses that fulfill requirements without adding unnecessary overhead costs. FIF provides a collaborative environment in which members analyze requirements, discuss alternative approaches, and recommend practical solutions. FIF is a highly valuable resource for an organization's management, business analysts, developers, technology support, operations, legal, compliance, and marketing personnel. FIF helps organizations become better informed and more productive in their efforts.
